Provision Market.

Our different markets and meat shops are fully supplied with good Beef and Veal.

Some fine quarters of young Lamb have been brought in from Long Island and Now Jersey. Sales are not large, owing to this being the season for sind. This fish is now very pienty, and selling at moderate prices
There is but little good poultry in market, and not a very great variety of wild game.

Green vegetables for the season are in abundance. We notice some very fine asparagus, from Shrewsbury, N. J., at 41 and 32 a bunch; some from Long Island at 22. Green Feas, from the South, at 6: the half pock, and a great show of water cresses from Flushing at 32 the peck basket.

Fish is plentiful enough, including fine lobsters and crabs.

rish is presented exceeding the Clerk of the Washington market abould allow the different fish men to usurp the new building, intended for the country farmers. The menters of fish nets occupy the greater portion for said purposes.

WASHINGTON, April 24, 1845. Foreign News-Feeling Consequent thereon-Speculations as to the reasons of the British Ministers for getting so "huffy" all at once—Mr Calhoun and Mr. Buchanan—Is Mr. Buchanan equal to the Emergency?—Opinions conflicting thereon—Reasons why England wont go to War—Extra Session-Mr. Polk and his Inaugural-Mr. Caleb Cushing and his Glorification about the Chinese Treaty - Credit thereof due to Commodore Kearney-Some Facts-Correspondence promised tomorrow-Regulation about Navy Dress-Value of the Globe-Members of Congress.

The Eaglish news, by the Caledonia, received this morning, at full length, in the Herald, has created considerable excitement. The public sentiment is, however, unanimous that not one inch of the Oregon Territory should be given up to the "menaces" or "threats" of Eegland. Rather, say they,go to war a hundred times over, and bequeath a war to our children, than yield a single inch.—

they, go to war a hundred times over, and bequeath a war to our children, than yield a single inch.—
War, and war to the knife, is in the mouth of every one—no one thinking for one moment of allowing Great Britain to cheat the United States by her diplomacy, or bully them by her threats and armaments out of what they are indubitably entitled to. Even those who went their length against Texas, go the whole figure for Oregon. It is ours—indisputably ours—and ours it must remain.

In the meantime many speculations are affoat as to what has induced the British Ministry, all of a sudden, to assume this arrogant tone. What, is asked, can be the reason for assuming all this flurry of wounded dignity at a passage in the address of the American President's, which they themselves say does not possess the importance of an official document—nor can it be regarded as forming part of legislative proceedings? Why did they not resume this tone when they received intelligence of the passage of the bill for the occupation of Oregon in the House of Representatives, by a vote of three to one? Why wait till Congress had adjourned!—Why take exceptions to these words in an address not possessing "the importance of an official document?" Can it be, ask the friends of Mr. Calhoun—and even some of those who cannot be called the friends of the great Southerner—can it be that the Ministry of Great Britain has assumed this threatening, menacing tone, because Mr. Calhoun was not retained in the State Department? And because they think they can terrify Mr. Buchanan into the assumption of a lower and humbler tone than Mr. Calhoun used in relation to our Foreign Affairs? and because they think that Mr. Packenham's assertion "that Mr. Calhoun was the hardest man he ever had to deal with, for there was no getting round him at all" does not, or will not apply to Mr. Buchanan? And will they get round him? is the question anxiously added by those who think Mr. Buchanan is not equal to the emergency.

The general opinion appears to be that Mr. Bucha him? is the question anxiously added by those who think Mr. Buchanan is not equal to the emergency.

The general opinion appears to be that Mr. Buchanan is so very cautious, as to amount to timidity, and it is feared by many that he will not be found equal to the emergency. His friends, however, say that these men don't know Mr. Buchanan. True, he is cautious, say they, and so he ought to be, but he is also firm, and the more you push against him the more he won't move; and they say that the present is the very opportunity to bring James Buchanan out in bold relief and show what he is, and so put him in the straight and high road to the Presidency. It is earnestly to be desired that Mr. Buchanan may prove to be the man his friends represent him to be, firm and sagacious, equal to the emergency, and determined not to yield one atom of the just rights of his country—for in such a course the administration would undoubtedly be supported by the country, even if Great Britain should make war upon this giant young republic.

A common opinion seems to prevail among the community here, that there is more smoke than fire in all this English outburst. Most persons say that England knows too well her internal dangers to go to war with this country, and so give the Irish a chance of making themselves independent; with troubles brewing in Canada, France ripe for a war, and the almost certainty if once she goes to war, it must and will resolve itself into a general war, in which all would be against England for the sake of the spoils which she holds in such large proportions, so tempting and tantalizing to all other nations.

There is some talk about an extra session of Congress being convened, though until something more definite should be done, it is difficult to con-

There is some talk about an extra session of Congress being convened, though until something more definite should be done, it is difficult to conceive what Congress could do just now. There is great activity in the State Department just now, and Mr. Buchanan had a long conference with the President this merning, and he also received despatches from Mr. Pakenham, by the hands of his private secretary. No one seems to expect for a moment that Mr. Polk will retreat from the position assumed in his inaugural, and great anxiety is manifested to learn, if possible, what was the purport of the despatches sent by Mr. Pakenham, and what will be the reply thereto. Nothing, however, is as yet known on this subject.

Mr. Caleb Cushing has of late, since his return from China, received a very great amount of glorification on account of his successful diplomacy with the Chinese, because he went there, signed a treaty, and came back again. It will be interesting with the Chinese, because he went there, signed a treaty, and came back again. It will be interesting to your readers, and the public generally, to know, that the actual credit, or the greater part of the credit to be attached to this treaty, belongs of right, to the gallant Commodore Kearney, who went out to China during the British war, in the Constellation, accompanied by the Boston, in order to protect American interests, &c. The gallant old veteran nobly performed his duty, and not only protected American commerce, but placed his country on an equal footing with the English, had direct communication with the Governor of Canton, demanded and obtained redress for injuries inflicted; and, had he been vested with powers, would have made and completed the treaty for which Mr. Cushing has received so much credit. As it was, he had correspondence with the Imperial Commissioner on the subject, obtained from him a promise of equal privileges with those conferred on the English, after their expensive war, and recommended the sending of an American agent, in connection with commercial affairs, to treat with the Chinese, long before Mr. Cushing, or any one else in this country, ever thought of a treaty with the Chinese. All these facts I will establish by an abstract of a very voluminous correspondence now on file in the Navy Department, which I will forward to you to-morrow, with copies of some of the most important of the correspondence between Commodore Kearney and the Imperial Chinese Commissioner. Give justice to all men, and do not take the laurels, so hardly won by the gallant old tar, to bind round the brows of Mr. Cushing, or any other man.

The following regulation has been issued by Mr. Secretary Bancroft, which, it will be perceived, makes some important changes in the dresses of naval officers. It is Mr. Bancroft's first general order:—
